INTRODUCING

The Chick Mission

The Chick Mission idea "hatched" when Founder Amanda Rice's fertility preservation coverage was denied by her insurance company. She understood the treatment plan of chemotherapy, radiation and long-term drug therapy would likely render her infertile and chose to cover the costs on her own.

Knowing other patients may not pursue preservation simply because of the cost barrier did not sit well with her... socioeconomic standing should not dictate opportunities to have biological children after a person battles cancer!

In response, The Chick Mission was born to...

HOW OUR MISSION

makes an impact

Despite having only 48 hours to make a life-changing decision to preserve my eggs for future children, I felt a sense of hope. I still had hope that one day I would become a mother. I had hope that this wouldn't lead to deep regrets of me not attempting to do everything that I could to be a mother. I still have this hope.

You meet communities like the Chick Mission who believe in your strength and walk alongside you on the road to (and through) survivorhood. And one day – to parenthood. THEY give you hope. THEY inspire you. THEY believe that you will get to this moment, too.

Emily | Cancer Survivor, New Mom

When I was diagnosed with breast cancer, I lost hope and tried to mount the impossible task of preparing to lose my life. When I realized I would live, but perhaps not have the chance at a family, I felt I couldn't handle the emotional roller coaster and began to lose hope again. The Chick Mission stepped in and brought light to a dark situation. The Chick Mission means the world to me, and I will be forever grateful for their support.
